Data mining is the process of extracting the useful information from huge data set or from large database. In other words, data mining is the abstracting of important data from huge database. Data mining can be implemented to relational databases, data warehouses, object-oriented databases, structured-unstructured databases, etc.